You have before you a history book. But no, do not shut the covers too quickly. Lessons are over now!

As in the theme of this book we have attempted, half-seriously, half-jocularly, to portray, in a modern's language, through a modern's eye, some of the women who have made history;—So, here, within these pages we have hoped to enshrine some of the scenes, the people, the happenings, and some of the memories which have made Wesleyan—for you.

Herein you will find recorded a year's life at "The Oldest and Best"—a record, the real substance of which is as old and as beautiful as "The Princess" within her turreted mansions of learning—and, yet, as new and as modern as the class that is graduated in this year of nineteen-hundred-and-thirty.

Dedication

To one whose untiring care and comforting devotion has brightened the most trying hours of all college life—the hours of sickness. To one who has played so great a part in making college "home" for us.

To one who, by twenty-five years of service to Wesleyan, has created for herself an endeared place in the life of the college, and a lasting shrine in the hearts of the girls who have come under her influence.

To

Mrs. Florrie G. White

Do we, the members of the staff, with love and appreciation, dedicate this volume of the

VETERROPT.

Preface

*History, all students know,
Repeats itself. This book will show*

*That if the folks of modern nations
From past events make applications,*

*They'll profit by the grave mistakes
That everyone in history makes;*

*They'll also find some inspiration
From those who win their approbation.*

*Intimate sketches we'll give you here
Of famous women as they appear*

*To the college girl, the girl of today,
Who looks at things in a different way.*

Hours of Beauty

Knowledge hath her temple here,—
With radiance that charms the eye
Upon its marble columns fall
The constant-changing rainbow hues of beauty—
The flaming blush that paints the East
With rose, their snowy whiteness dyes
The dazzling, splendid light of moon
Illumines them, stately and sublime
In beauty.

The Western majesty of light
That stains the twilight Vesper hour
Upon them dwells—benediction for Their beauty.

Between their polished purity
The purple dusk is lost in night;
A crescent moon, a single star,
Shines down upon them, lost in dreams
Of beauty.

Wesleyan

Wesleyan,
You have brightened the past
In its obscurity.
Like a soft, clear star in a misty night,
You have drawn youth under your spell
And sent it out again,
Softened and uplifted
By the inspired dreams
Of your future.

Wesleyan,
You will glorify the future
In its oblivion.
Like a sure, true sun in a foggy sky
You'll draw youth under your influence
And send it out again,
Brightened and ennobled
By the crystallized dreams
Of your past.

Chapter Two

❧ Organizations ❧

The Original Feminist

*Good Queen Bess, one very fine day,
Took a little stroll down London way.*

*It must have been raining as she reached the Mall,
And our Highness was dressed like a glad rag doll.*

*Along came Walter in his best bib and tucker.
"Aha!" said Elizabeth, "Here comes the sucker."*

*She spoke to Walter, and all in a muddle,
He took off his coat and covered the puddle.*

Now perhaps you're wondering the secret of this—Queen Liz, herself, was the first Feminist.

*She organized this, and she organized that;
She organized the cooks, and she organized the cat.*

*To the down-trodden males she has proved a tribulation,
For you see, she showed the power in organization.*

The Wreckage

The mid-afternoon sun drenched everything with a gay, glad radiance. The sea wind blew bold and free, like a wild, gladsome thing, across the narrow strip of green, hill-dappled Long Island which tapers in where the waters of ocean and sound meet.

The sky was vivid blue, the ocean a dark, deep indigo, full of power and eternal mystery. On the distant horizon of the east dusty, yellow clouds hovered, half hidden by the waves which rose and fell with ceaseless monotone, each one a higher, more greedy, grasping thing than the one before.

In the Casino the party there knew nothing of the wild, brilliant beauty of the world without. The room was grey with cigarette smoke; and the fumes of liquors hung heavy over everything. The shrill, hysterical voices of the women, their high, metallic laughter beat against the guttural, incoherent talk of the men. There was an abandon, a feverish revelry, a coarse gaiety about the scene which comes with whiskey.—Then of a sudden there was quiet—the tense hush that stifles one before a storm strikes. And the wind outside the Casino seemed to die out with a sound that was like a sob.

HELEN KILPATRICK.

Our Love

*Our love was like a night-flower—
Wondrous full and sweet
And glistening fair
To be so short-lived—
Like a night-flower, too,*

*It shriveled and faded
When night was gone.
But still—throughout the day,
Haunting me still,
Faint perfume lingers on.*

By WINNIFRED JONES.

And After Sunset—The Dark

Jerome Crosby drove out into the open road—alone in the cart. He looked back only once. The sky was a misty purple streaked with rose, and the cabin against the sky was black—severely outlined. There was a light in one window. For a long minute Jerome gazed at that light—it was Jem's room. He gripped the back of the cart with his huge hand; the knuckles showed white.

Quickly the day faded, but even more rapidly something vital died in the soul of Jerome Crosby. There was a dull, dead stare in the vacant eyes he turned toward the railroad station ahead of him. He lashed the horse with all his strength; the startled horse jumped, and the man in the cart lashed again and again—and laughed.

ELIZABETH McMAHON.

Joy

*Love is a happy fountain,
Leaping upward to the sun.
Shimmering with prismic lights,
Tinkling soft a note of joy,*

*It glitters in the light—
A moment thus—then ripples slow
Into a tranquil pool
With rainbow mem'ries in its depths.*

Joan Starts Something

Now everyone knows
That the modern girl's clothes
Are of new innovations a part;
But what they don't know
We'll endeavor to show—
And that is, who gave this a start.

That Maid of Orleans
Put on masculine "jeans,"
And without telling mother a thing,
Made the scared British run
With her sword and her gun,
And then put up Charles for her king.

This young girl demure,
We are practically sure,
Had a complex ahead of her time,
And startled all France
By donning some pants
And displaying her figure sublime.

Now girls of today,
In a more modern way,
Are beset by the same inhibitions;
The "masculines" wail
As each femme and each frail
Appears dressed in his latest renditions.

Foan says:

"Leading an army into a fight—hum-m, that's easy compared to keeping one man out of one."

The "It" Girl of Ancients

*An ancient queen lived near the Nile,
And heroes, hot and bothered by her smile,
Forgot to conquer nations,
And did deeds beneath their stations.*

*Cleopatra, queen of Egypt, was this dame;
She rivaled modern "it" girls with her fame.
With the illustrious Mark and Julius in her band
We'll be forced to give the little girl a hand.*

*If we take the ancient histories at their word,
This highfalutin' vamp was quite a bird.
She had everything, in fact, was quite the stuff;
From her we learn the lesson—treat 'em rough.*

*Superlative in everything was she;
To the heart of every man she held the key.
Thus, Cleo by her conquests goes to prove
That charm and wit and beauty, mountains move.*

Cleo says:

*"A 1930 model Ford touring,
or a barge on the Nile—one place is as good as another if there's moonlight, and you have sense enough to take a back seat."*

Winnifred Jones, Most Intellectual

Aspasia

Aspasia, the Beloved, versed in all the wisdom of the ancients. She was the adored of Pericles, the admired of Socrates—A slave girl, her subtlety and charm ruled the Greeks through the great man whom she loved.

Margaret Garnett, Most Athletic

Christina of Sweden

Christina of Sweden—a glistening figure of virile womanhood; startlingly clear in contrast to the stolid darkness of the Middle Ages, she gleams like a mountain of snow against the background of her own sombre Swedish pines—A woman, an athlete, and a scholar is she—a strong and independent personality that causes us to pause and wonder.

Laura Lilly, Most Attractive

Mary Stuart

Mary Stuart, Lady of France and Queen of the Scots—Mary of the many loves and fervid hatreds—A beautiful yet fragile flower cruelly planted in a too rugged soil—A child of life was she, doomed only to taste of it and die.

Nel Mullis, Most Popular

Ma

Maria Theresa, the mother of queens and emperors, she was the power of an epoch—
A ruler, though first a woman, she won all hearts in her time, filling even her enemies with admiration for her sovereign and womanly greatness.

Mary Banks, "Miss Wesleyan"

Mary Washington

Mary Washington—the Mother of America, whose love and wise guidance, strength of character and human weaknesses have been made immortal for us through her son, the first of our great.

Helen Kilpatrick, Most Capable

Florence T

Florence Nightingale—the leader of a new group of women—With an inspired energy and efficiency born of the modern world she brought health, order and hope into war-stricken countries. Giving the utmost herself, she demanded it of others—and ministers and kings granted her obeisance, while sick and lonely soldiers gave her worship.

Blanche Duvall, Most Talented

Eleanora Duse

The Tragic Duse—from five to seventy-five worshiped on the stage, she lived the life of a martyr. Sacrificing all to genius, even herself, the personality of The Duse has become the embodiment of Art—her life a rich series of creations—and her face comes to us tinged with a touch of the eternal—for so it reflected the humanity which she lived to portray.

Wilhelmina Dougherty, Cutest Freshman

Victoria—the girl queen, who answered the call of state on the eve of young womanhood the sovereignty, the calm yet unbending force, the intrepid wisdom which made her reign one gloried in by the Britains and admired by the world.

She Craved a Career

*You've all heard the story of Helen and Paris,
How between them they stirred up a war.
She craved a career in Troy as the fairest,
But "against it" was hubby, not "for."*

*"What would I gain by staying at home?"
Asked Helen, with petulant pout.
"Minding the baby and answering the phone,
And ordering the servants about."*

*"I rather do things and go interesting places,
And make for myself quite a name."
So fair Helen rebelled and kicked over the traces,
And set out to establish her fame.*

*Now Helen caused trouble and furor, it's true,
But her idea itself was not bad.
There's a place in the world for the women, though few
Who have dreams such as fair Helen had.*

Helen says:

"No woman ever set the world on fire by striking a match to the one in the kitchen stove."

Dedication

*We, the Senior Class, would like in some small way to show
Our deep appreciation, so that all may know
Of a splendid guide, wise friend, and cheerful leader, who
With a sunny smile has led us on the higher things to do,
And so the Class of 1930, with love and true affection,
To Mrs. Donald Mitchell, Jr., dedicates this section.*

*Counting on a name, time-tested and true,
Owning traditions well mixed with the new,
Never feeling unable to grasp things of worth,
Seeking the best that God gave to earth,
Engraving the talents of youth through the land,
Raising high standards that always will stand,
Victorious in purposes, studies and play,
Attaining true knowledge that e'er will stay,
Tuning our hearts to life's melody,
Offering our second mother to be,
Realizing at the end, her purpose to guide,
Youth through life's most turbulent tide.*

AFTER a thorough study of leading pianos, based on musical worth, superior construction, and proven durability, we purchased sixty-four Conovers for use in our Conservatory. Prof. Maerz said, when the new equipment was installed, "We have arrived at a point when the Conservatory had to have the finest equipment available for both the teachers in their studios and the students in their practice rooms."

NO music school anywhere has finer piano equipment throughout than Wesleyan. Our students, therefore, have the advantage in their work of pianos of the finest quality. Conover pianos are sold in the Southeast by the CABLE PIANO COMPANY OF GEORGIA, with stores at Macon, Atlanta, and Jacksonville.
